"Blue Bird" Chinaware, New and Pretty at $4.85 a Set

This is one of the prettiest patterns we have ever shown of American Chinaware. The primitive shipment was here a short time ago and sold out almost before we were aware of its presence. The bluebird on white Chinaware is novel and very effective. Coming as it does on this inexpensive China ware accounts for its popularity. There are two attractive patterns and each dinner set has 42 pieces in strictly new shapes.

WASHINGTON NEWS GOSSIP

By CHARLES BROOKS SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 28.—Former Congressman Harry C. Woodard, of Spencer, and his campaign manager, Judge Thomas A. Brown, of Parkersburg, are in the city. They came here for the purpose of conferring with Representative Frank Woods of Iowa, who is chairman of the National Republican Congressional committee about Mr. Woodard's candidacy for Congress this year in the Fourth district. They spent an afternoon going over the situation in that district with Chairman Woods, and the conference was entirely satisfactory to all concerned.

The national organization is keenly interested in carrying the Fourth district for the Republican party, and will give Mr. Woodard's campaign every assistance it can give within its power. It will supply the best speaking talent available, no end of literature applicable to that contest, and do all it can otherwise to insure the election of the popular and able ex-congressman.

Mr. Woodard is fortunate in having a man of the influence, energy, and political experience of Judge Brown at the helm of his campaign. Republicans here think. While the House runner is no tyro when it comes to showing political organization as every-man, woman and child in the Fourth district knows, to have the devoted help of a man equally as proficient in political management is a situation to be counted fortunate.

"I don't think the outlook for success of the party in the district could be better at the beginning of a canvass than it is now," declared Mr. Woodard to friends here today. "I can hold it just as it is we will have nothing to complain of, but we expect to improve it from day to day till the balloting starts."

Judge Brown declared he had the utmost confidence in the voters of the district to elect Mr. Woodard to the House of Representatives, where he made such a fine record for eight years as a member who was alert to the needs of the country and his constituents. The headquarters of the Woodard campaign, Judge Brown said, are located in Parkersburg, fully manned and equipped for a thoroughly aggressive campaign.

Pension increase bills have been introduced in the House by Representative Neely in favor of the following persons:

Sarah C. Arnett, of Fairmont; Samuel A. Robertson, of Hollandsburg; Ezekiel Trickett, of Fairmont; Michael P. Wells, of Fairmont; George W. Linn, of Grafton; Mrs. Phoebe Hawkins, of Fairmont; Thos. M. Reynolds, of Short Creek, and Mrs. Annie E. Patterson, of Henwood. Also, a bill to grant a pension to Pauline K. Boden, of Moundsville.

Louis Wilson Jefferson, of Wheeling, was today recommended by Major Neely for a cadetship at the Naval Academy. He also recommended the appointment of Clarence M. Highland as rural mail carrier at Chester.

A petition of the Va. & Pittsburgh Coal & Coke Co., asking for an extension of a rural mail route from Riverdale, which was filed several days ago by Mr. Neely, has been favorably acted on by the officials at the Post-office Department.

Major Neely took up with the Pension Commissioner yesterday the claims of Reuben B. Shaver, of Monongah; Walter B. Warrick, of Woodruff, and T. L. Anglemeyer, of Mannington. James H. McGill, a prominent wealthy and highly respected citizen of Moundsville, is in a fair way to win a fight which he has stubbornly made for twenty years to clear his military record. He has been hampered at the doors of Congress all that time, but has never been able to get committee action. He has the promise of it now. It was made by the chairman of the sub-committee of the House committee on military affairs which has had Mr. McGill's demand for justice upon its desk lately. The promise was given yesterday by that official to Representative Neely. He promised Major Neely that the bill would positively be favorably reported out of committee next December. He said it was a just bill and would have been reported out at the session, but it was put aside for the more important business of army reorganization. He said that McGill had proven his case.

Ordinarily when a bill is introduced to "correct the military record" of a soldier, it means that there is a charge of desertion in the record against him, and that if he can get it removed it gives him a pensionable status. That is not true of this case. Nor is the bill a prelude to a request for a pension. Mr. McGill receives a pension of $17 a month under his first discharge. It is the record of his discharge from his second enlistment which beclouds a military record, which, as the records show, was more than ordinarily a good one.

McGill enlisted as a private and was promoted right along up the company line, finally winning the first lieutenant because of bravery in action. Then the trouble started which has never ceased to annoy and humiliate him every day of his life since. He was court-martialed, tried and ordered dismissed. He protested his innocence then and has never ceased to protest since. He was convicted on the evidence of two men. Only recently has one of these men, now old and repentant, come forward to try to undo a great wrong which he was partly responsible for perpetrating on a fellow-man. He has told his story in the form of an affidavit, legally sworn to, signed and the notarial seal affixed. In a word, Lieutenant McGill was "framed up" by an officer under him who desired the place in the command held by McGill. He faked up the case and the testimony, and bribed the false witnesses. That's the story. McGill was an innocent man.

It is the death-bed repentance affidavit that has lifted the McGill demand for justice from the government he fought for from the limbo of things that are lost in committee pigeonholes. But for that McGill might have fought on until the end of his earthly time and there would have been no clearing up of his good name.

FAMILY AVOIDS SERIOUS SICKNESS

By Being Constantly Supplied With Theford's Black-Draught.

McDuff, Va.—"I suffered for several years," says Mrs. J. B. Whitaker, of this place, "with sick headache, and stomach trouble."

Ten years ago a friend told me to try Theford's Black-Draught, which I did, and I found it to be the best family medicine for young and old.

I keep Black-Draught on hand all the time now, and when my children feel a little bad, they ask me for a dose, and it does them more good than any medicine they ever tried.

We never have a long spell of sickness in our family, since we commenced using Black-Draught."
